

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The invention relates to an audio appliance, such as a CD or DVD player. To read and reproduce both compressed and uncompressed audio data on such an audio appliance in real time without buffer-storage, the audio appliance is designed such that the rotation speed of the storage medium may be set on the basis of the type of audio data which are to be read.